Artists and makers considering a holiday sales opportunity in Arlington have a date and a listed booth fee to start with: Create Arlington’s Christmas Market is scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 3, from 5 to 8 p.m. at Wellspring on Main, 201 W. Main St. The organizer lists artist booth fees at $15 and says admission is free.

Create Arlington describes the event as featuring local artists and makers, Big Tyme BBQ and live music. That gives prospective sellers a basic picture of the planned market, but the listing does not name vendors or specify what products will be available. It also does not say whether booth spaces are still open or explain how artists can apply.

For a maker deciding whether to pursue the opportunity, those unanswered details matter as much as the listed fee. Before making plans, check with the organizer through Create Arlington’s official website to ask about space availability and the application process. It would also be sensible to confirm what the booth fee covers, any display or setup requirements, and when vendors may arrive. Those details are not provided in the published listing and should not be assumed.

The event may be worth a look for Arlington-area makers seeking a local place to present their work, but the available information is limited. No individual sellers, product range or sales terms have been announced in the listing reviewed for this article. Shoppers can note the free admission and scheduled hours, while vendors should confirm participation details directly with the organizer before relying on a spot.
